? Thanks for help guys. A: You can find the table definitions for nbConvert here: There's no such line for DataFrame with column index anymore. The same issue will appear if you'll read the table definition directly in your Python script: import nbconvert table1 = nbconvert.read_table('/path/to/your/python/script.py') If you can't do without reading it directly, then I suggest to install the nbconvert-sklearn module and use nbconvert.read_table_sklearn() instead. $ nbconvert -p packagepath --to latex --title=My Beautiful Notebook file.ipynb or $ pdflatex -synctex=1 -file-line-error -file-line-error-verbose -interaction=nonstop-mode -f pdf -output=MyBeautifulNotebook.pdf file.ipynb For a checkbox solution, let me know if this helps you. package main import ("fmt" "os" "github.com/fatih/color" "github.com/spf13/cobra" "golang.org/x/net/context" "golang.org/x/text/plumbing" "golang.org/x/text/message") // TODO: These messages should actually be added to a config.toml. func NewConfigRefreshCommand(out io.Writer, query string) *cobra.Command { var args = []string{} if query!= "" { args = append(args, query) } return &cobra.Command{ Use: "refresh []", Short: "Update the version in the configuration file for a project", Long: "Update the version in the configuration file for a project. This updates the Git SHA and the version of the repository in the.gitconfig. If no version is specified
